Forty year-old Bryan Greene has been teaching high school World History for what seems like an eternity. His reputation for being a hard-ass hasn't won him any love from the kids who stream through his classroom year after year...or so he thought. As Fate would have it, one of his previous students, Peter Jenkins, is now the creative force behind a series of graphic novels about a gay time-traveler who bears an uncanny resemblance to Bryan. Shaken by this discovery, the long-closeted educator feels compelled to confront Peter and demand an explanation.

The teacher becomes the student when Bryan learns the reason why Peter chose him to represent his fictional hero. This revelation opens both Bryan's eyes and his heart – but can he overlook the moral dilemma of his attraction to a former pupil sixteen years his junior, in order to find the timeless happiness both he and Peter desire?
