Have you been asked to lower training costs through the use of learning technologies? If so, then you need the most recent addition to the ASTD competency study series. This book, which comes with accompanying digital materials (available via download), focuses on the skills and knowledge you need to use, select, and manage learning technologies. The study gathers data from leading experts in the field, and helps you determine which competencies, roles, and outputs are vital for the successful application of learning technologies within your organization. In addition, the study provides a classification system that helps to distinguish the various technologies and demonstrates their relationship to each other and to instructional methods. The book provides you with a complete set of assessment tools that you can reproduce and use for determining developmental needs.
