Not illustrated. 1907 Excerpt: ...band, or nation of Indians has, besides its distinctive name, a sign by which it is known and designated by all other Indians. The sign for "Sioux" is made by drawing the right hand horizontally from left to right across the throat; "Cut-Throat." All Indians are familiar with the use of certain signals. They have but few, nor are many required. When engaged in battle, all subordinate chiefs, who accompany their respective bands of warriors in the conflict, are governed by signals from the head warchief, though oral commands are generally given by the subordinate chiefs direct to their men. All large forces of Indian cavalcade are divided into two columns which are designated as right and left columns. The head warchief, seated on his pony in a conspicuous place, say one-half mile to a mile distant from the engagement, conveys his instructions to the various subordinate chiefs by means of signals made with his lance, upon which has been fastened a dressed skin about two feet wide and three feet long and which is painted black. The various signals are made as follows: Attack, both columns: The lance is placed in a vertical position directly in front of the face, and extending five or six feet above, and waved forward. Attack, right column: The signal-lance is held horizontally to the right and waved forward, making a quarter-circle. Attack, left column: The lance is held horizontally to the left, and waved forward, making a quarter-circle. Retreat: Three separate signals for retreat, right, left, or both columns, are made exactly the reverse of the attacking signals, by waiving the lance backward, instead of forward. Right Column attack left line of the enemy: The retreat signal is given to the right column, and as soon as the retreat is b...
